Two Worlds—the Old and the New.

Peace, in her palace over the Atlantic,
From the New World dears her awnings around,
While war's leashed hounds strain for bloodied traffic
To her Old World can scarce be held in bound.

Lo! here each nation armed against its neighbor,
Cries in the face of Heaven's throne for fight;
There to the blessed battle field of war,
United States take all the world's view.

For a far different choice from the impingings
Of broadsword and spear, and the impingings
Of the sword and the spear, and the impingings
Of the sword and the spear, and the impingings

Happy young life, that between two oceans,
Thy guardian Atlantic and Pacific,
Grows apart from our Old World's commotions,
With room to spread and space for powers prolific.

Widely exchanging ideas and rumors
For spades and ploughshares, axes, saws and treadles,
Thou givest thy strength to engines and steam hammers,
And thy gun metal moulds into medals.

No growth but thy widening soil can bear;
No rest, but the rich ground on which thou standest,
Somewhere or other bids thee stop and share.

No height thou hast but all thy sons may reach,
No good but all are free to reap thy profit,
No truth but all thy race may learn thy reach,
No lie but where life's mask may scuff it.

Oh, happy in thy stars, still rising higher;
Happy 'em in thy stripes so lightly borne;
How far may thy meridian growth aspire,
That thou shouldst so majestic in thy morn!

To what height may not Heaven's higher favor lead thee
In cycle of the ages yet to be;
When first hundred years of life have made thee
For Arts and Strength, the Giant that we see!

VARIETY.

He ran three squares after what he thought
Was a street car light, and after he got out
Of breath he laid down on the doorstep disgusted;
It was only a lightning bug on his spectacles. —[N. O. Bulletin.]

A NEW RELIGIOUS SECT.—Russia has a new religious sect, one of whose leading tenets is that man is subordinate to woman, and shall confess his sins to his wife at least once a week. We always thought man became a lord of creation through some misunderstanding.

This is what the Baptist clergyman of Boston, G. F. Pentecost, says of the liberal clergy in that city, according to an editorial statement in the Boston Times: "Well, Murray, and Hale, and Savage, and such men, are able, smart men, but they have no religion. It is not, Christian, 'rejoined Mr. Pentecost. 'You admit they are able men,' we timidly remarked. 'Yes, they are smart, but Satan is smart.'"

A FRENCH BACHELOR.—If we may believe the London World, declines to marry until he can be sure of crowding all the "true happiness of married life into one week." His idea is to marry an heiress on Monday, have a son and heir on Tuesday, see him baptised on Wednesday, have his mother-in-law die on Thursday, take out letters of administration on Friday, bury the old lady on Saturday, and on Sunday take possession of the fortune. Is not this man aware that it wouldn't be right?

EDITING A PAPER.—The majority of readers seem to think that nothing can be more easy than to edit a paper, but of all difficult employments by which men make their bread and butter, there is none, we firmly believe, that so taxes the mind, temper and flesh, as that of editing a paper. There is none that requires a nicer tact, a sounder judgment, a more constant application, a quicker wit, or a kinder heart. A cheerful temper could never succeed as an editor; nor a narrow minded man, nor an unforgiving one. —[Odd Fellows' Banner.]

A THREE-YEAR OLD PRAYER MEETING.—Two little girls at Johnsville, Jennie Gray and Aggie Faulkner, were having a prayer meeting all by themselves one day last week, in the upper hall, while the older folks were in the parlor below. Jennie was standing dangerously near the stairs and singing, while Aggie knelt near her, making a prayer. Aggie rose up suddenly and tipped Jennie over down the stairs. Aggie tried to wave her, and they both went down together. Jennie began to cry a little, when she thought that the accident might have been caused in the regular course of business, so she said to the inquirer, "Aggie did you get up to speak?"

"They ought to carry this cremation idea a little further," solemnly remarked a Chicago father before his household last evening, "just enough to introduce the heathen custom of burning a man's wife up with him, as they do among the Hindoos."

"Ah, yes, father," replied the eldest daughter, sitting near, "but in this you wouldn't find many wives who could be burned to try that!" The father, however, looked at that girl a minute over his spectacles, "ahmed" violently, and then asked her if it wasn't about time she went to bed. —[Chicago Journal.]

AN OX ANXIOUS MAN.—He was around yesterday afternoon inquiring after "the latest," and he looked so humped up, that many wondered what possible benefit a political victory could be to him. When they made bold to ask him he replied:

"Well, you see, my brother Bill is fishing for the office of Secretary of War."

"He is, eh?"

"Yes, sir; and if he gets it he will have brother Sam appointed Revenue Collector."

"Yes."

"And then Sam will get the old man appointed Postmaster."

"Yes."

"And the old man will get my brother-in-law on as a letter-carrier."

"Yes."

"And my brother-in-law will use his influence to get me appointed weighmaster of the Western District, and then the whole family will walk about in clover knee-deep. You see how much depends upon this thing. 'How's Florida gone?' —[Detroit Free Press.]

A JONAH'S negro, while waiting for the train to go out last night, struck up with several old acquaintances. "How is Jennie Robertson?" asked one, after the usual "time of day" had been passed.

"Did you hear 'bout Jim?" queried the Jonah's darky.

"I ain't heard from Jim since he cut loose from de chain gang. He ain't down with the billiousness, is he?"

"Oh, no! Jim ain't sick, an' he ain't bin sick. He's wanted for ter ride Mars Bob Proctor's mule de under Sunday, an' de mule 'proctored' to have mule inggement. I done bin fool wid dat mule before, an' I told Jim he better not get tangled up wid her. But he loved de wux a hose doctor, an' den he axed me for a chew of tobacco, an' got de bride, an' coteh de mule, and got on her—well, I spec I better go git my ticket. Tey tell me dis train goe a callhoun'."

"Hold on, you ain't tole us 'bout Jim,' said one of de ducky auditors.

"I done tole you all I know. Jim got on de mule, an' she sorter hump herself, an' den der wux a scuffle, and when de train biled I see de nigger on de groun' and de mule eatin' at de troff wid one uv Jim's galluses wropped round her hino leg. Den arterwards de kuzen er de mule an' sed Jim dier sorter accidental-like.
